

Laboratory medical

Colorado State University Atmospheric Chemistry Building

Pinkard Construction Company provided comprehensive preconstruction and construction services for Colorado State University's new 13,000 sf, $2.5 million Atmospheric Chemistry building located at the Foothills Campus in Fort Collins. The new structural steel building has research and teaching labs, along with offices for faculty, research staff and graduate students. The Atmospheric Chemistry Building gives Colorado State University's

University of Colorado MCDB Laboratory

University of Colorado Center for Visualization growing program a "state-of-the-art" space for their studies of pollution and air quality. Ken Paul at Colorado State University Facilities Management was the Architect of record.

University of Colorado Biochemistry Addition

DaVita Dialysis Centers

Lakewood, Colorado 303.986.4555
Colorado Springs, Colorado 719.265.5545
www.pinkardcc.com